

I Am a Child of God – Color Code

Have fun teaching I Am a Child of God with this creative color code logic puzzle!

How to Play:

Sing through I Am a Child of God before introducing the activity.

Post the posters below for the verses you'd like to include. I recommend including just one verse. You can include or leave out the chorus.

Tell the children something happened with your posters – all the words got covered in colors! Ask them what they notice? (Colors, size of the boxes, some words visible, etc).

Can they help you decode the posters? Sing through the poster while the children look for clues!

After each time singing through the song, have the kids help you decode part of the poster. You can identify what one of the colors represents as a group or start to add in actual words. You can write in the missing words over the boxes, or just leave them colored but with the key decoded up on the board as a help.

Extension Activities:

- Have the primary children sing only the plain uncolored words. Switch and sing only the colored words.
- Divide the room into 2-4 groups. Assign each group a color. Each group sings the words in their color. All groups sing the plain uncolored words! Rotate colors and sing again.
- Come up with a fun action for each color. It could be a clap for orange, a pat for green, a jump for red, a stomp for purple, etc!
- Cut out all the colored boxes. Leave the rest of the page intact, as much as possible. Post the posters with all the colored boxes missing. Mix the colored words up and spread them out on the whiteboard. Have the children help you place the boxes back into the right spots! Size and color will help. This is an advanced challenge, probably best for older children.
