For Such a Time as This Color Code

How to Play:

- Older primary children will especially gravitate toward this neat color code activity. For this activity, I created a code with 5 different colors that each represent a type of word in the song.
- For example, any references to Esther will be in one color and any references to God will be in another color. As you practice this song, figure out what each color stands for to solve the code!
- The only prep work you'll need to do for this activity is print out a copy of the color code and key for this song.
- At the beginning of singing time, refresh the song by singing through For Such a Time as This once.
- Then, tape up the color code and keep the key tucked away. Hmm, what do all these colors mean? Does anyone have a guess? That's right – the colors stand for words in the song. Let's see if we can figure out the pattern.
- Look for all the “pink” words in the song. What might pink represent? Sing through the song again and see if there are any guesses. Yes! The color pink represents Esther.
- Pick one color at a time to solve. One strategy might be to write in all the missing lyrics first, then see how each set of words is similar.

Color Code:

- Pink – References to Esther
- Green – References to the king
- Blue – References to God
- Yellow - Verbs
- Purple – Descriptive Words

Extension Activities:

- Assign one color to each class and have each class figure out what their color stands for. Then, have them sing out their keywords.
- Pick a fun action to pair with each color. Ex. Pink = Clap, Green = Tap Head, Blue = Heart Hands, Yellow = Jump, Purple = Slide to the side
- Create a word box with all the missing lyrics. Then, create a chart with 5 columns, one for each color. Organize the words into the chart as you review.
